KART RACER

Fourteen-year-old Watts Davies wants to race. A gifted, but unpolished go-kart racer, he wants to win. And he wants to have his father's support when he crosses that finish line.

The untimely death of his mother has left him estranged from his dad - a former International Karting Federation champion - just when Watts needs him the most. To make matters worse, Rodney Wells, the town bully is doing his best to keep Watts out of the upcoming IKF Regional Championships.

Watts seeks solace at the local video arcade, operated by game guru Zee. When the current champion, Scott McKenna steps into the picture, it galvanizes Watts and his father to rekindle their relationship, letting Watts enjoy the exhilaration of true teamwork with his hodgepodge crew of friends and one special girl named Dahlia.
